The global Paper Machine Size Presses market size is expected to reach $ million by 2029, rising at a market growth of % CAGR during the forecast period (2023-2029).

Paper machine size presses are components integrated into paper manufacturing processes to enhance the quality and properties of the produced paper. Size presses apply a sizing solution or coating to the surface of the paper as it passes through the machine. This sizing treatment imparts specific characteristics to the paper, such as improved surface smoothness, increased resistance to water absorption, and enhanced printability. The size press is a crucial part of the papermaking process, contributing to the final paper product's quality and performance. It allows paper manufacturers to control and optimize the surface properties of the paper according to the intended application, ensuring the paper meets the desired standards for various end uses, including printing and packaging.
