Abstracts

According to our (Global Info Research) latest study, the global Perlite market size was valued at USD 485.7 million in 2023 and is forecast to a readjusted size of USD 660.8 million by 2030 with a CAGR of 4.5% during review period.

Perlite is an amorphous volcanic glass. Due to having relatively high water content, it expands from 2 to 20 times of its initial volume in high temperatures. So that it becomes light with open and closed air spaces. These features set the perlite as a raw material used in many important industrial areas.

In terms of value, the expanded perlite segment is projected to grow at a higher CAGR during the forecast period. This growth can be attributed to factors such as introducing high strength to concrete with less water content and easy workability. Expanded perlite finds applications in several industries including agriculture & horticulture, construction, industrial, and food & beverages.
