Abstracts

The global Personal Meal Delivery market size is expected to reach $ 7593 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 10.7% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

Personal Meal Delivery refers to a service that delivers single-portion meals to individual consumers, typically designed for one person. It includes ready-to-eat meals, meal kits, and healthy food options, focusing on convenience, balanced nutrition, and personalization, and is widely used by single households and busy urban consumers.

Personal Meal Delivery is evolving toward greater personalization and intelligence, offering customized meals based on individual taste preferences and nutritional needs such as weight loss, muscle gain, and glucose control. Demand for healthy and functional foods, including low-calorie, low-fat, and high-protein options, continues to grow. The industry is increasingly integrating with prepared and semi-prepared food solutions to improve efficiency and reduce costs, while leveraging AI and data analytics for precise recommendations and demand forecasting. On the supply chain side, cold chain logistics and last-mile delivery are being optimized to ensure food quality, alongside a shift toward eco-friendly packaging to reduce plastic waste. Meanwhile, application scenarios are expanding beyond home use to offices, fitness, and healthcare settings.
