Abstracts

The global Platinum Jewellery market size is expected to reach $ 7917 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 3.3% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

Platinum jewelry is high-end jewelry made primarily of platinum, commonly marked Pt950 (95% platinum content). Platinum is a naturally silvery-white precious metal with extremely high density, ductility, and corrosion resistance. It is not easily tarnished or deformed, making it suitable for long-term wear. Due to its rarity and stability, platinum is often used to make wedding rings, engagement rings, and high-end custom jewelry, and is especially suitable as a material for diamond-set ring settings. In contrast, '18K white gold' is actually a gold alloy containing 75% gold, with the addition of metals such as palladium and nickel to achieve its silvery-white appearance. The two differ significantly in essence and value. The average price of this product is approximately $684 per piece, with global sales of approximately 8.9 million pieces.

Platinum jewelry is not only the 'aristocrat' among precious metals but also a symbol of emotion and commitment. Its rarity (compared to only 1/30th the amount of gold in the Earth's crust), durability, and low allergenicity make it one of the preferred materials in the wedding ring market. As consumers increasingly value quality and personalization, platinum jewelry is shifting from a traditional symbol of high-end luxury to a new direction of 'emotional customization.' Especially among high-net-worth individuals and young elites, platinum is gaining popularity due to its understated luxury and timeless qualities. In the future, platinum jewelry that combines sustainable mining, digital customization, and cultural storytelling will continue to shine in the high-end jewelry market.
