Abstracts

Polyurethane is a leading member of the wide-ranging and highly diverse family of polymers or plastics. Polyurethane can be a solid or can have an open cellular structure, in which case it is called foam.

Scope of the Report:

This report focuses on the Polyurethane Foam in global market, especially in North America, Europe and Asia-Pacific, South America, Middle East and Africa. This report categorizes the market based on manufacturers, regions, type and application.

In 2017, the building & construction segment accounted for the largest share of the polyurethane foam market, by end-use industry. However, the bedding & furniture segment is projected to account for the largest market share by 2023.

Rigid foams are essentially low-to-high density foams with high stiffness levels. These foams are primarily used as insulating foams and structural foams in commercial and residential construction for board and laminate insulation, and as foam roofing. They are also used in various other applications. Spray foams, on the other hand, are basically low-to-medium density foams. They are primarily used for insulation, roofing, and flotation. Spray foam is projected to be the fastest-growing type segment due to its increasing applications across industries.

Asia-Pacific is projected to have the largest market share and dominate the global polyurethane foam market from 2018 to 2023. Growth of the polyurethane foam market in this region is driven by the growing building & construction, bedding & furniture, electronics, automotive, footwear, and packaging industries. Increasing population and economic development are the other driving factors.

The worldwide market for Polyurethane Foam is expected to grow at a CAGR of roughly xx% over the next five years, will reach xx million US$ in 2023, from xx million US$ in 2017, according to a new GIR (Global Info Research) study.
