Abstracts

The global Preformed Crowns market size is expected to reach $ million by 2029, rising at a market growth of % CAGR during the forecast period (2023-2029).

Rising prevalence of dental diseases among children, increasing demand for orthodontics among the general population, development of tooth revision and polishing techniques, and constant regulation across the dental industry are the key factors driving the growth of prefabricated crowns market revenue.

To stop further damage and restore function of primary molar teeth that are decayed or malformed, a dentist will usually use a filling (a soft material that is placed in the cavity and hardened) to restore the tooth to its original shape. Alternatively the dentist may place a crown over the tooth to cover it. This usually requires an injection in the gum to numb the tooth before trimming it down (conventional technique). These crowns are pre-made (i.e. preformed) in a variety of sizes and can be metal or white, with the correct size being chosen to fit the trimmed down tooth. The Hall Technique is an alternative method for fitting metal crowns, where there is no need for an injection or tooth trimming as the crown is simply pushed over the tooth. Preformed crowns are recommended by specialists in children's dentistry for the management of baby back teeth (molars) when they are affected by moderate to advanced tooth decay, or where the enamel has malformed during development or the tooth has had to have root canal treatment.
