Private Fire Firefighting & Rescue Services are a type of professional fire management and risk prevention service provided by non-governmental organizations or enterprises. They aim to supplement public fire protection systems and improve fire safety in industrial, commercial, and community facilities. This service encompasses two core areas: first, fire suppression and emergency response, where dedicated or private fire brigades provide rapid response, on-site firefighting, evacuation, and rescue during a fire; and second, fire risk management and preventive services, including fire system installation and maintenance, regular inspections, risk assessments, fire training, and emergency drills to help reduce the probability of fires and potential losses. Private fire and prevention services typically target industrial plants, commercial parks, residential communities, and high-risk facilities. Through professional and systematic management and technical means, they compensate for the shortcomings of public fire protection forces in terms of resources, coverage, or response time, providing comprehensive fire prevention solutions for businesses and society.
