Abstracts

The global Puffed Cat Food market size is expected to reach $ 38812 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 5.1% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

In 2025, global production of puffed cat food is estimated at approximately 14.2 million tons, with an average selling price of about USD 1,950 per ton. Puffed cat food is a dry cat food produced through high-temperature and high-pressure extrusion processing, using meat, grains or tubers, fats, and functional additives as primary ingredients. It features a porous structure, good digestibility, long shelf life, and high suitability for large-scale industrial production. Typically formulated to meet complete nutritional standards, puffed cat food can be fed as a sole daily diet and represents the highest shipment volume and widest channel penetration among all cat food product forms globally.

From a market perspective, puffed cat food remains the dominant category within the cat food market, accounting for the core share of total consumption, particularly in the mid-range and mass-market segments. While growth in traditional low-end puffed products has slowed, premium and functional puffed cat food continues to expand, including high-animal-protein formulas, grain-free or hypoallergenic recipes, and products enriched with prebiotics and functional nutrients. Industry trends indicate ongoing optimization of extrusion processes toward lower-temperature operation and improved nutrient retention, alongside brand efforts to enhance value through ingredient traceability, formulation transparency, and functional segmentation. Market consensus suggests that although air-dried and baked cat food are growing faster, the cost efficiency, supply stability, and scalability of puffed cat food will ensure its role as the long-term foundation of the cat food market.

This report studies the global Puffed Cat Food production, demand, key manufacturers, and key regions.
