Abstracts

Recloser is a self-controlled device, which guards a power system against service interrupts by automatically opening and closing as short circuits are detected. In other words, it is a switch that re-establishes an electrical circuit manually, remotely, or automatically after a disruption of service. It detects the fault, and closes and resets to open the line, which normally occurs three times. The recloser offsets the fault and reconnects the distribution line. In an overhead distribution system, 70 to 90 per cent of the faults are of temporary nature and they last, at the most, for a few cycles or seconds. Thus, the recloser, with its opening/closing characteristic, prevents a distribution circuit from being left out of service for temporary faults.
