Abstracts

The global Residential Property Management Services market size is expected to reach $ 18466 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 4.9% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

Residential property management services refer to the professional and systematic daily management and comprehensive services provided by professional property service companies on behalf of owners or owners' committees for residential properties.

The development of residential property management services is driven by multiple factors, including residents' continuously increasing demands for quality and safety in their homes, the expansion of the urban housing stock and the comprehensive promotion of renovation of old residential areas, government policies to strengthen grassroots governance and smart community construction, digital technology-enabled service upgrades, and the transformation of property management companies. As the real estate industry shifts from incremental development to stock operation, homeowners are not only concerned about basic cleaning and security, but also expect convenient online services, a rich community ecosystem, and asset preservation capabilities. At the same time, policies encourage property management companies to participate in public affairs such as elderly care services, waste sorting, and emergency response. Coupled with capital's preference for high-quality property management companies, these factors are jointly driving the accelerated evolution of residential property services from a cost center to a value creation center.
