The global Senior Cat Foods market size is expected to reach $ 5994 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 5.7% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

In 2025, global sales of senior cat food are estimated at approximately 860,000 metric tons, with an average selling price of around USD 4,720 per metric ton. Senior cat foods are formulated for cats aged 7 years and older, emphasizing kidney health, joint support, immune system maintenance, and digestibility. These products typically feature reduced protein load, optimized phosphorus content, added joint-supporting ingredients (such as glucosamine and chondroitin), and prebiotics to support digestive health, targeting the specific nutritional requirements of aging cats. Key distribution channels include household retail, specialty pet stores, and e-commerce platforms.

From a market perspective, senior cat food represents a functional and lifecycle-specific segment within the pet food market, with demand closely tied to the age profile of the pet population. Market growth is driven by increasing proportions of aging pets, rising owner awareness of pet health, and greater recognition of high-quality functional cat foods. Core competitiveness lies in scientifically formulated recipes, efficacy validation, and brand trust, with penetration of premium senior cat foods steadily increasing. Overall, this segment exhibits stable demand and continuous functional upgrading, supporting steady market growth.
