Abstracts

The global Ship Valuation Services market size is expected to reach $ 911 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 6.5% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

Ship valuation services refer to the assessment and appraisal of the market value, insured value, or depreciated value of ships and their related assets by professional institutions or registered ship valuers. Services typically include technical condition inspections, age assessments, market price analysis, maintenance and operating cost estimations, and legal and compliance reviews. Ship valuation is widely used in ship sales and purchases, financing and mortgages, insurance underwriting, lease agreements, and maritime arbitration, providing shipowners, investors, insurance companies, and financial institutions with scientific and reliable decision-making support.

With the development of the global shipping market and the increase in ship asset transactions, the demand for ship valuation services continues to grow. Fluctuations in international trade, the expansion of ship financing and leasing businesses, and the standardization of the ship insurance market have all driven the application of professional valuation services. Furthermore, as ship technology evolves and regulatory requirements increase, accurately assessing ship value becomes more complex, making the professionalism and added value of valuation services increasingly important. In the future, the application of digital valuation, remote inspection, and big data analytics technologies will improve the efficiency and accuracy of ship valuation, further expanding the market size.
