Aged people, especially women, use skin tightening products for several reasons. These reasons are rooted in physiological changes, societal expectations, and personal preferences. Moreover, millennials are indeed more interested in skincare as they show a growing interest in skincare due to early prevention, a focus on health and wellness, access to information, social media influence, and a preference for personalized experiences.

As the population ages, the demand for skin tightening products is likely to continue to grow. The aging process can cause the skin to lose elasticity and firmness, which can result in sagging and wrinkles.
