Abstracts

The global Snubbing Unit market size is expected to reach $ million by 2029, rising at a market growth of % CAGR during the forecast period (2023-2029).

Snubbing Unit is a special equipment for working with pressure. Pressure operation mainly refers to the pressure operation carried out in the wellbore with professional equipment under the pressure mode at the wellhead of oil and gas Wells. Maintain the pressure in the wellbore during construction, no need to pressure (wash) well, pressure relief. For oil Wells, the biggest advantage of pressure operation is that it can protect and maintain the original production capacity of the formation, effectively protect the formation pressure, avoid the pollution of the reservoir, reduce the number of stimulation measures such as acidification and fracturing, and provide good conditions for the long-term development and stable stimulation of oil and gas fields. For high-pressure oil and gas Wells, there is no need to stop injection and release pressure before operation, which can shorten the construction period. Eliminate the cost of killing fluid and surface construction equipment required for conventional operations, reduce pollution and protect the environment. For shale gas well operation with pressure, there is no need to kill the well, which reduces the pollution of the killing fluid to the formation and effectively prevents the gas layer from being crushed.
