Talent management consulting is a professional service designed to help organizations transform talent into a sustainable strategic competitive advantage through systematic diagnosis, design, and implementation. It focuses on the synergy between "people" and "organization," with core services covering key modules such as talent strategic planning, leadership development, performance and compensation systems, organizational culture, and employee experience. Consultants utilize professional methodologies and data analysis to provide end-to-end solutions from top-level design to operational implementation, ultimately aiming to improve organizational effectiveness, drive strategic goals, and build future-ready organizational capabilities.

Its prospects are deeply integrated with future work patterns and digital technologies, exhibiting three major trends: First, data-driven and intelligent approaches, with AI enabling HR decisions to shift from experience-based judgment to precise prediction; second, agility and experience-first principles, requiring consulting services to respond quickly to market changes and focus on creating personalized employee journeys and enhancing engagement; and third, the increasing strategic value, as consulting focus shifts from traditional functional modules to talent strategy innovation, skills reshaping, and hybrid organizational management in the face of ongoing talent competition and organizational change. This field will continue to grow and evolve towards a more forward-looking, integrated, and technology-enabled direction.
