To address the limitations of standard adhesive tapes in meeting specific size, shape, or performance requirements, and the low efficiency and accuracy of user-managed tapes, tape processing services emerged. Since their inception in the mid-to-late 20th century, the tape processing industry has experienced significant growth. Currently, tape processing services encompass slitting, rewinding, die-cutting, coating, and printing, and are widely used in packaging, electronics, automotive, medical, and everyday office applications, providing customers with customized tape products and efficient solutions.

As a fundamental industrial consumable, the market growth of tape processing services is deeply intertwined with manufacturing upgrades and the development of emerging fields. Enterprises need to focus on high performance, green technology, and intelligent manufacturing, breaking through international brand monopolies through technological innovation, supply chain integration, and market expansion, while simultaneously seizing opportunities presented by increasingly stringent environmental regulations and expansion into emerging markets to achieve high-quality development.
