Abstracts

According to our (Global Info Research) latest study, the global Temporary Staffing market size was valued at US$ 1055 million in 2025 and is forecast to a readjusted size of US$ 1590 million by 2032 with a CAGR of 6.1% during review period.

Temporary staffing refers to a flexible employment model where companies hire temporary workers through professional service agencies or platforms to meet short-term, seasonal, project-based, or sudden manpower needs. The service provider handles recruitment, payroll, and basic management, while the client focuses on work arrangement and business management. Its core value lies in helping companies quickly respond to business fluctuations, control fixed labor costs, acquire specific professional skills, and transfer employment risks, making it a key human resource solution for optimizing organizational flexibility and operational efficiency.

Its prospects are deeply intertwined with the gig economy, digital transformation, and organizational change, exhibiting three major trends: First, platformization and technology-driven approaches, with digital matching platforms significantly improving the efficiency and accuracy of matching temporary workers with job positions; second, advanced skills and project-based approaches, expanding the service scope from basic labor to professional fields such as technology, creativity, and management to meet companies' short-term specific needs; and third, a strategic value reshaping, where temporary staffing will evolve from a cost control tool into a core strategic capability for companies to build agile teams, acquire cutting-edge skills, and flexibly expand organizational boundaries, leading to continued market expansion and a move towards specialization and compliance.
