Abstracts

The global Themed Attraction Design market size is expected to reach $ 1333 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 5.6% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032). To address the problems of severe homogenization of traditional leisure spaces, weak narrative experiences, and insufficient visitor immersion, themed attraction design has emerged. Since the rise of the modern theme park industry in the mid-to-late 20th century, the field of themed attraction design has experienced rapid development, and has now evolved into a comprehensive professional discipline encompassing multiple dimensions, including story world building, spatial narrative planning, immersive environment creation, high-tech interactive integration, and operational process pre-planning. It is widely applied in theme parks, resorts, cultural tourism businesses, museum exhibitions, and urban public spaces, aiming to transform core themes into tangible experiences that are enjoyable, engaging, and shareable through highly integrated creative and technological means, thereby significantly enhancing the project's unique appeal, visitor engagement, and commercial value.

Themed attraction design is shifting from 'scale expansion' to 'quality improvement,' achieving differentiated competition through cultural innovation, technological integration, and ecological sustainability. In the future, it needs to overcome bottlenecks such as IP homogenization and single profit models, seize opportunities in cultural tourism integration, emerging markets, and cross-industry innovation, and build a complete industry chain ecosystem of 'design-construction-operation-derivatives,' promoting the industry towards high-quality and sustainable development.
