Abstracts

TV subscription is the service that is delivered (on paying a subscription fee) to the viewer using a cable or over the air. Video and voice services, games, movies, and contents from various demographics are some of the most popular services offered by the TV operators. Digital TV gained prominence after 2000, which gradually decreased the share of the analog cable TV segment. On the other hand, radio subscription is a radio service offered by the radio broadcasters free of cost or on paying a subscription fee. The radio technology uses waves that are a part of the electromagnetic spectrum with frequencies ranging from 3 kHz to 300 GHz.

SCOPE OF THE REPORT:

This report studies the TV and Radio Subscription market status and outlook of Global and major regions, from angles of players, countries, product types and end industries; this report analyzes the top players in global market, and splits the TV and Radio Subscription market by product type and applications/end industries.

The growing popularity of multiscreen services is one of the primary growth factors for the TV and radio subscription market. Multiscreen services connect cell phones, laptops, and tablets. Multiscreen TV services are gaining preference due to the increasing number of smartphones and tablets. TV service providers are also offering services that converge multiple screens to enhance customer satisfaction. Innovation in smartphones and tablets consequently result in better apps, bigger screens, and improved battery capacity.

The Americas is expected to be the major revenue contributor to the TV and radio subscription market during the forecast period. The high average revenue per user (ARPU) of TV subscription services in North America and the rising costs of IPTV
