Abstracts

The global UHT Soup market size is expected to reach $ million by 2029, rising at a market growth of % CAGR during the forecast period (2023-2029).

UHT soup refers to soup that has undergone the process of ultrahigh temperature (UHT) treatment to ensure long shelf life without the need for refrigeration. UHT treatment involves rapidly heating the soup to a high temperature, typically above 135 degrees Celsius, for a short period of time, effectively sterilizing it. This process helps to eliminate harmful bacteria and microorganisms while preserving the taste, flavor, and nutritional value of the soup. UHT soup is packaged in airtight containers to maintain its sterility and can be stored at room temperature until opened. It offers convenience and flexibility as a ready-to-eat soup option that can be easily transported and consumed without reheating.
