Abstracts

The global Vegan Seafood Products market size is expected to reach $ 4353.7 million by 2029, rising at a market growth of 5.4% CAGR during the forecast period (2023-2029).

With the increase in vegan and vegetarian diets, many companies have responded with plant-based seafood options. In the past, plant-based protein options were limited to beef, poultry and pork look-alikes, however, now we can find plant-based fish and shellfish of many varieties. Although the industry is very new, the products are gaining popularity fast. The plant-based meat industry is worth more than $900 million, and saw an 18% increase in sales last year. According to market research by the Plant-Based Foods Association, 79% of millennials already consume plant-based meats, and plant-based seafood producers expect the same popularity for fish-less products. Plant-based tuna, salmon, caviar, scallops, squid, crab and shrimp have already entered the market. The most common ingredients in these products are soy, seaweed, yeast, legumes and various vegetable oils and starches.

Vegan Seafood Product is seafood made without any animals. It's better for the oceans and marine life because it's not attached to overfishing and ghost nets. Animal-free ingredients can be used to make shrimp, canned tuna, fish filets, sushi-grade fish, crab cakes, and more. What it's made from varies by brand. Some use protein-rich legumes to mimic the flaky texture of fish. Others use soy for a meaty texture. Or, some use konjac, a root vegetable that's used to make zero-calorie foods like shirataki noodles and konnyaku, a bouncy, chewy cake that's used in Japanese cuisine.
