Abstracts

The global Veterinary Consulting Service market size is expected to reach $ 2106 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 5.7% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

To address the health risks and care challenges faced by pets and livestock due to uneven distribution of medical resources, lack of timely health guidance, and insufficient knowledge of preventative care, veterinary consultation services have emerged. Since their rise in the early 21st century alongside the development of internet technology and the pet economy, this service has become a crucial bridge connecting professional veterinarians with pet owners. Currently, veterinary consultation services have evolved into a comprehensive service system encompassing online text and image consultations, video consultations, health knowledge bases, medication guidance, prevention plan development, and remote expert consultations. These services are widely applied in areas such as daily health management of companion animals, disease control in farms, initial assessment of emergencies, post-treatment rehabilitation guidance, and intervention for animal behavioral problems. They overcome time and space limitations, providing timely, professional, and continuous health support to pet owners, thereby effectively improving animal welfare, optimizing treatment pathways, and reducing pet ownership risks.

The industry will evolve towards 'specialized precision diagnosis and treatment, efficient digital operation, and ecological full-chain services.' In terms of technological breakthroughs, gene editing therapy for genetic diseases and wearable devices for real-time monitoring of animal health indicators will become new growth points. From a social value perspective, veterinarians are not only medical service providers but also emotional bonds between humans and pets?building a healthy ecosystem of harmonious coexistence through professional skills and humanistic care. Policy recommendations include improving the training system for licensed veterinarians, establishing a salary guarantee mechanism for grassroots veterinarians, and promoting the inclusion of pet medical care in medical insurance pilot programs to achieve sustainable development of the industry.
