Abstracts

The global Video Tutorial Creation Software market size is expected to reach $ 402 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 5.2% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

Video Tutorial Creation Software is a category of specialized tools for producing instructional, how-to, training and demo videos. It is purpose-built to explain workflows, software operations, technical procedures and knowledge points to learners.

Compared with general-purpose video editors, it prioritizes tutorial-oriented capabilities: screen capture, webcam overlay, real-time annotations, cursor highlighting, voiceover integration, captions, step marking, and supporting export for training distribution. Typical application scenarios include employee onboarding, software operation demos, customer education, online courses and technical SOP guidance.

The industry is evolving through three broad stages: Screen Recording ? Integrated Tutorial Authoring ? AI-Assisted Knowledge-to-Video Creation

Traditional products focused primarily on recording the desktop and adding narration. Current platforms increasingly combine screen, webcam and audio capture with multi-track editing, annotations, captions, templates, LMS connectivity and interactive learning functions.

The next competitive phase is increasingly AI-centered. Current market research identifies text-to-speech, multilingual generation, AI voice-over, automated video creation and template-driven generation as important emerging capabilities.

The market is fragmented and product boundaries overlap significantly. Vendors originate from screen recording, e-learning authoring, enterprise video, presentation software and general video creation.

North America is currently the leading regional market. The dedicated Video Tutorial Creation Software study attributes this to high technology adoption, digital transformation and the concentration of major software vendors.

Europe represents a significant market driven by corporate training, universities, software companies and multilingual instructional requirements. Localization, accessibility, data privacy and integrations with enterprise learning environments are particularly important competitive factors.

Asia Pacific offers some of the strongest long-term expansion opportunities as digital education, enterprise software adoption, online training and creator activity expand. In the adjacent Video Creation Tool market, Asia Pacific is identified as the fastest-growing region.

Main Market Drivers

Expansion of e-learning and corporate digital training. Organizations increasingly use instructional videos for employee onboarding, compliance, product training, software training and customer education. Video tutorial platforms reduce the need to repeat instructor-led sessions and allow users to learn asynchronously.

Growth of software and SaaS products. As digital products become more complex, vendors require large volumes of product walkthroughs, knowledge-base videos, customer onboarding materials and software demonstrations.

Hybrid and remote work. Recorded tutorials and asynchronous demonstrations allow distributed employees to explain processes without requiring live meetings, supporting internal knowledge transfer and documentation. The adjacent screen-recording market similarly identifies online learning, remote work and digital communication as major growth drivers.

AI-driven reduction in production cost. AI transcription, captioning, narration, translation, voice generation and automated editing lower the technical skill and time required to produce instructional content.
