Vinegar is a common condiment, usually made from substances containing starch or sugar (such as grains, fruits, etc.) through a series of processes including fermentation. Its main components include acetic acid and water, and it also contains small amounts of other substances such as amino acids, sugars, and esters. Vinegar has a unique sour taste and flavor, and is widely used in cooking, food processing, and daily life. It can be used to add sourness to food, stimulate appetite, and aid digestion.

Vinaigrette is a common salad dressing, mainly made by mixing oil (such as olive oil, vegetable oil, etc.) and vinegar (such as red wine vinegar, white vinegar, fruit vinegar, etc.). Usually, seasonings like mustard, salt, and black pepper are also added to enhance the flavor and adjust the taste. Vinaigrette has a refreshing taste and rich layers, which can add sourness and aroma to salads, improve the overall quality of salads, and can also be used to marinate ingredients or as a seasoning for certain dishes.
