Abstracts

Whey protein concentrate powder is derived when whey protein is dried and milk is filtered. Whey protein concentrate powder is micro-filtered to keep its amino acid content as pure and strong as possible. It also maintains its silky smooth texture when blended with milk or water. It consists of 80% of protein and a small amount of carbohydrates and fats. As the carbohydrate and fats content in whey protein concentrate powder is minimal, it can be consumed as a regular or a mass gain diet. The filtration process involved in the production of whey protein concentrate powder is less intense than whey protein isolate powder, which makes whey protein concentrate powder richer in calories, carbohydrates, fats, and proteins as compared with isolate powder.
