The global Workday Human Capital Management Service Software market size is expected to reach $ 1057 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 5.7% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

orkday Human Capital Management Service Software, or HRMS or eHR system for short, is an integrated information management platform designed to systematize, streamline, and automate an organization's human resource management processes through digital technology. It covers the entire career lifecycle management from employee onboarding to offboarding, with core modules typically including recruitment and placement, key personnel, compensation and benefits, performance management, training and development, and employee self-service. The core value of this software lies in integrating and re-engineering traditionally complex and fragmented human resource administrative tasks. Through data centralization and process automation, it significantly improves the efficiency and accuracy of the HR department.

Simultaneously, as a central database for corporate talent data, it provides management with real-time, accurate talent data dashboards and analytical reports, supporting more scientific and data-driven decisions in talent planning, retention, and motivation. This transforms the human resources department from a traditional transaction processing center into a business partner and value center supporting the realization of corporate strategy.

Workday Human Capital Management Service Software has a promising market prospect and is undergoing a profound evolution from a functional tool to an intelligent and experiential platform. The core drivers of its continued growth lie in: the rigid demand for enterprise digital transformation, the urgent requirement for refined human capital operation, and the ever-increasing pressure for compliance and cost reduction and efficiency improvement. Future development trends will revolve around three key directions: First, deep intelligence, where AI will permeate all aspects of human resource management, enabling more accurate resume screening and job matching, intelligent employee consulting services, and big data-based prediction of turnover risks and talent inventory analysis. Second, experience-centricity, where software design will place greater emphasis on 'employee experience,' integrating health management, internal social networking, and instant recognition and feedback functions through an integrated, mobile-friendly employee self-service portal to enhance employee engagement and organizational warmth. Third, ecosystem integration, where HRMS will no longer be an isolated system but a crucial component of the enterprise's digital platform, seamlessly connecting with systems such as finance, business operations, and collaborative office work to achieve data and business flow synergy and build an integrated enterprise operation ecosystem.
