According to our (Global Info Research) latest study, the global Zolbetuximab market size was valued at US$ 432 million in 2025 and is forecast to a readjusted size of US$ 2557 million by 2032 with a CAGR of 17.4% during review period.

Zolbetuximab is a recombinant, chimeric monoclonal antibody directed against Claudin 18.2 (CLDN18.2), a tight junction protein specifically overexpressed in certain gastrointestinal malignancies. It binds selectively to CLDN18.2 on tumor cell surfaces, triggering antibody-dependent cellular cytotoxicity (ADCC) and complement-dependent cytotoxicity (CDC) to induce tumor cell lysis and inhibit tumor progression. Designed for targeted therapy of CLDN18.2-positive advanced solid tumors, it serves as a key targeted agent for gastric and gastroesophageal junction cancers, offering a new treatment option for patients with limited therapeutic choices. In 2025, global Zolbetuximab production reached approximately 410,000–420,000 vials

Zolbetuximab, as the world's first and only approved monoclonal antibody targeting Claudin 18.2 (CLDN18.2), has established a core market position in the precision treatment of gastric and gastroesophageal junction adenocarcinomas due to its pioneering status. Its commercial value relies on the unique high expression specificity of this target in certain gastrointestinal malignancies and the significant efficacy advantages demonstrated in key clinical trials, opening up a new field for patients with limited responses to traditional treatment regimens. The current market is dominated by the original developer with no direct competing products, allowing it to rapidly set treatment standards and build brand barriers after approval in major global markets. The core driver of market growth stems from the substantial unmet medical need in advanced gastric cancer, as well as the popularization of companion diagnostic technologies and improved patient screening rates. Although high pricing has restricted market accessibility to a certain extent, its market outlook remains broad as a breakthrough therapy. In the future, its market lifecycle will depend on the continuous expansion of indications, deeper penetration into global markets, progress in medical insurance access, and response to the increasingly competitive environment brought by the launch of subsequent drugs targeting the same target, including monoclonal antibodies, ADCs and cell therapies.
