A third-party Central Sterile Supply Department (CSSD) refers to an independent facility, built and operated by specialized outsourcing companies or influential medical institutions, which provides sterilization services to healthcare facilities. Unlike in-house hospital sterilization centers, third-party CSSDs offer regionalized, centralized, and specialized services that help healthcare institutions reduce capital investment, lower operational costs, and enhance sterilization quality and service efficiency. These services also minimize infection risks and significantly improve resource utilization. As hospitals continue to expand, many are turning to third-party CSSDs to meet the increasing demand for sterile instruments and supplies, making it a vital component of infection control in modern healthcare.
