The home decor industry in Indonesia has developed over the years to become one of the country's most important manufacturing sectors helping propel the local economy's development.

The sector benefits from various competitive advantages, chief of which is the ready availability of raw materials. As the country is endowed with vast forests covering an area of 114 million hectares, suppliers have easy access to different types of wood and wood-derived components.

The line is export-oriented. Although most small and midsize makers rely on sales brought about by local and foreign tourists, the bulk of output is absorbed by foreign markets.

This report focuses on the main types of home decor from Vietnam – home furnishings, handicrafts and vases & pottery.
