Anaerobic Adhesives Market Size & Trends

The global anaerobic adhesives market size was estimated at USD 603.66 million in 2023 and is projected to grow at a CAGR of 5.8% from 2024 to 2030. The market driven by the rising demand for anaerobic adhesives in applications like textiles and apparel, additionally, the material's increasing popularity in the production of eyewear frames and photographic films is another key driver, with eyewear manufacturers preferring it due to its lightweight, durable, and flexible nature.

The growing consumer demand for low-tar cigarettes globally and properties that extend the shelf life of food products are enhancing the market growth, with the rise in cigarette usage expected to propel the market growth ahead.

Anaerobic adhesives are unique in their curing process. When deprived of atmospheric oxygen, they solidify into a tough state. They remain in a liquid state until isolated from oxygen and in the presence of metal ions, such as iron or steel. The curing process requires air isolation, metal contact, and sufficient temperature. This characteristic makes them ideal for applications such as thread locking, thread sealing and retaining.

Manufacturers invest in research and development to enhance the strength, durability, and versatility of these adhesives. For instance, new formulations offer improved bond strength, faster curing times, and increased resistance to extreme temperatures and chemicals. These advancements allow them to meet the evolving needs of industries such as automotive, aerospace, and electronics.

The demand is primarily driven by their wide range of industrial applications. In the automotive industry, they are used for thread locking applications to prevent loosening of critical components subjected to shocks and vibrations. In the electronics industry, they provide secure and reliable bonding for circuit board assembly. The manufacturing industry relies on these adhesives for applications such as flange sealing to ensure leak-proof connections in pipelines and tanks.
