Abstracts

The global biopesticides market size was estimated at USD 8,366.6 million in 2025 and is projected to reach USD 26,082.1 million by 2033, growing at a CAGR of 15.3% from 2026 to 2033. The increasing adoption of biopesticides in sustainable agriculture, organic farming, and integrated pest management practices is driving market growth.

Rising regulatory support for eco-friendly crop protection solutions, growing demand for residue-free food products, increasing focus on soil health, and continuous innovation in microbial and biochemical formulations are contributing to the market's steady expansion.

Biopesticides are naturally derived crop protection solutions formulated from microorganisms, biochemicals, and plant-incorporated protectants, valued for their targeted action, environmental safety, and reduced impact on non-target organisms. Biopesticides are applied across various stages of crop production and are increasingly recognized as a critical component of sustainable agriculture, with applications spanning cereals and grains, fruits and vegetables, oilseeds and pulses, and specialty crops. The rising demand for biopesticides is largely driven by growing adoption of organic farming practices, increasing emphasis on integrated pest management, and the need for residue-free agricultural produce, along with advancements in formulation technologies that enhance efficacy and field performance.

The increasing awareness of environmental sustainability and food safety is supporting the adoption of biopesticides globally. Rising concerns related to soil degradation, pest resistance to chemical pesticides, and regulatory restrictions on synthetic crop protection products continue to encourage the shift toward biologically based solutions, further strengthening demand for biopesticides across global agricultural markets.
