Market Size & Trends

The China commercial vacuum cleaner market size was estimated at USD 82.7 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a CAGR of 4.8% from 2025 to 2030. The growth is attributable to rapid urbanization and economic development in China that has led to increased construction of commercial spaces such as offices, hospitals, shopping malls, and entertainment venues, all of which require efficient cleaning solutions to maintain hygiene standards. This urban growth drives demand for commercial vacuum cleaners that are both effective and technologically advanced, catering to the needs of large-scale cleaning operations.

Another key driver is the rising awareness and regulatory emphasis on cleanliness and sanitation in commercial environments. Industries such as healthcare, hospitality, and retail are under growing pressure to comply with stringent hygiene regulations, boosting demand for vacuum cleaners equipped with features such as HEPA filtration and multi-surface cleaning capabilities. For instance, entertainment and leisure facilities in China prefer backpack-style wet and dry vacuum cleaners for their portability and efficiency, which helps staff maintain cleanliness in large spaces like cinema halls.

The competitive landscape in China also fuels market growth. Strong competition between international brands such as Dyson and domestic manufacturers such as Haier and Midea encourages continuous innovation and product diversification. This competition leads to the availability of a wide range of vacuum cleaner models tailored to Chinese commercial consumers' preferences, including energy-efficient and technologically advanced products. Additionally, the rise of e-commerce platforms in China facilitates easier access to these products, further expanding market reach and sales.

Furthermore, China's position as a major global manufacturing hub for vacuum cleaners supports market expansion. This robust production and export capacity ensures a steady supply of commercial vacuum cleaners domestically and abroad, sustaining market growth and innovation.
