Commercial Cleaning Products Market Growth & Trends

The global commercial cleaning products market size is anticipated to reach USD 36.3 billion by 2028, according to a new report by Grand View Research, Inc. The market is projected to expand at a CAGR of 9.7% from 2021 to 2028. The rapid and increasing urbanization across developing economies is a prominent factor leading to a positive market scenario for commercial cleaning products. In line with this, growing investments by countries in constructing office buildings, hotels, retail stores, malls, hospitals, and other commercial infrastructure will result in the subsequent demand for various types of cleaning products.

Moreover, a large variety of surface tops are being introduced, including natural stones, solid surfaces, engineered stones, concrete, ceramic tiles, laminates, wood, and glass, and these are gaining popularity across sectors. Different surface materials require different cleaning solutions. This scenario is expected to result in the growing adoption of different surface cleaners over the forecast period.

Additionally, during the forecast years, cleaning products that act as disinfectants and sanitizers are likely to see a significant increase in demand from well-publicized epidemics, such as the Ebola virus, swine flu, and most recently the Zika virus, which can spread more rapidly across the world. Consequently, healthcare facilities, hotels, tourist destinations, offices, and educational institutions are witnessing rising applications of these products.

Furthermore, there has been a paradigm shift in terms of economic growth from the West to potential emerging markets in the past decade. This has substantially increased the growth of new businesses across the globe. Regions with prominent developing countries, such as Asia Pacific, have seen decent economic growth owing to improved infrastructure and lighter regulations.
