Abstracts

The global magnesium sulfate market size was estimated at USD 1.03 billion in 2025 and is projected to reach USD 1.87 billion in 2033, growing at a CAGR of 7.7% from 2026 to 2033. The growth is driven by its extensive use in agriculture as a key nutrient source for improving soil health and crop productivity.

It supports essential plant functions such as chlorophyll formation and nutrient absorption, making it a valuable input in modern farming. The increasing focus on enhancing yield quality and ensuring efficient nutrient management continues to support its widespread adoption.

The magnesium sulfate market is supported by its growing use across pharmaceutical and personal care sectors, driven by its well-established therapeutic properties. It is widely utilized in medical treatments as well as in wellness and skincare products, where it supports applications focused on relaxation, recovery, and overall health. Increasing consumer awareness regarding hygiene and mineral-based solutions continues to contribute to its steady demand across these segments.

The market presents significant growth opportunities with the expansion of the magnesium sulfate monohydrate market and magnesium potassium sulfate fertilizer market. These fertilizer types are gaining preference due to their high solubility and efficient nutrient delivery, making them well-suited for precision farming practices. As the agricultural sector increasingly focuses on improving crop quality and soil performance, the growth of these segments is expected to create favorable opportunities for the overall magnesium sulfate market.
