Abstracts

The global meditation management apps market size was estimated at USD 2.20 billion in 2025 and is projected to reach USD 6.99 billion by 2033, growing at a CAGR of 14.67% from 2026 to 2033. Factors such as an increased number of individuals suffering from stress, anxiety, and depression, government initiatives that promote meditation and yoga, rising use of smartphones and tablets, and growing awareness regarding mental health drive market growth.

These applications guide breathing techniques, visualization exercises, and relaxation of muscles and the body. The growing awareness of mental health and overall well-being is one of the major driver for meditation apps, as modern lifestyles marked by stress, long work hours, and digital overload have contributed to rising rates of anxiety, depression, and sleep disorders worldwide. For instance, in March 2023, according to the World Health Organization (WHO), around 280 million people across the globe suffered from depression, and it remains one of the leading mental health conditions contributing to disability and reduced daily functioning. Meditation apps such as Calm and Headspace, provide guided mindfulness exercises that help manage stress, improve sleep, and enhance emotional resilience.

The growing use of smartphones is driving the growth of the meditation management app market. According to the Kepios. article published, in October 2025, the number of people using the internet worldwide reached about 6.04 billion, representing nearly 73.2 % of the global population, reflecting continued growth in online connectivity across regions. With mobile devices serving as the primary access point to the internet for most users, digital applications, including meditation, health, and elder care apps can scale rapidly in this favorable environment. Mobile-first behavior is shaping how people engage with information, services, and wellness tools, and as more users come online across demographics, the potential reach of technology-based health and well-being solutions continues to expand.
