Abstracts

The Middle East countertops market size was estimated at USD 5.43 billion in 2025 and is projected to reach USD 9.54 billion by 2033, growing at a CAGR of 7.3% from 2026 to 2033. The countertop market in the Middle East and Africa is expanding due to local construction and development trends.

Steady urban growth in cities such as Dubai, Riyadh, Doha, and Johannesburg has increased demand for apartments, villas, and other residential projects. This, in turn, drives the need for durable and attractive kitchen and bathroom countertops. The hospitality and tourism sectors in South Africa, the UAE, Qatar, and Egypt are also creating steady demand, as hotels, resorts, and restaurants require surfaces that can withstand frequent use. Additionally, government housing programs and commercial real estate projects across the region are driving demand for long-lasting and standardized countertop solutions.

In GCC countries, countertops are a core component of kitchens, bathrooms, hospitality interiors, and mixed-use developments, making them directly linked to new housing delivery as well as fit-out intensity. As urbanization, population growth, and government-led real estate development continue, demand for durable and aesthetically refined surface materials such as engineered quartz, granite, marble, and sintered stone has increased. These materials align well with contemporary interior design preferences that emphasize clean lines, open kitchens, and premium finishes, positioning countertops as a central design and value element rather than a purely functional component.

Consumer behavior is also shifting decisively toward remodeling and renovation, particularly in kitchens and bathrooms, which has further strengthened demand for countertops. Rather than undertaking full structural redevelopment, homeowners and landlords are increasingly prioritizing targeted upgrades that deliver visible improvements, enhanced hygiene, and increased property value. Countertop replacement offers a relatively fast and high-impact renovation solution, improving both functionality and aesthetics. Rising exposure to global design trends through digital media, combined with growing awareness of low-maintenance, heat- and stain-resistant materials, has accelerated replacement cycles, especially in urban apartments, rental properties, and secondary homes.

In Qatar, official planning data shows an increase in building permits during 2024, indicating an active pipeline of residential and non-residential projects that typically translates into demand for interior finishes, including countertops. In the UAE, particularly Dubai, government statistics and municipal data highlight a consistently high volume of building permits and ongoing residential and mixed-use development, supporting both new installation demand and refurbishment activity.

As consumers increasingly view kitchens and bathrooms as lifestyle spaces rather than purely utilitarian areas, demand is shifting toward premium, long-lasting countertop materials that enhance property value and align with modern design standards.
