Abstracts

The global pericardium diseases market size was estimated at USD 2.96 billion in 2024 and is projected to reach USD 5.06 billion by 2033, growing at a CAGR of 6.14% from 2025 to 2033. The growth is driven by the prevalence of cardiovascular conditions, aging populations, and improved diagnostic capabilities, which are driving demand for effective treatments targeting pericardial disorders such as pericarditis, pericardial effusion, and constrictive pericarditis.

Rising awareness about early detection and management of heart-related conditions is boosting the adoption of advanced therapeutics and minimally invasive interventions. Factors such as sedentary lifestyles, chronic infections, autoimmune diseases, and post-surgical complications have also contributed to the growing disease burden.

The global pericarditis market is driven by advancements in healthcare practices, evolving lifestyles, and technological innovation. Pericarditis, characterized by inflammation of the pericardial sac, remains the most prevalent pathological condition affecting the pericardium. According to the National Library of Medicine, pericardial cases are classified into acute, incipient, subacute, chronic, and recurrent forms, accounting for an estimated 15%-30% of cases. The increasing prevalence of cardiovascular risk factors, including hypertension, autoimmune disorders, infections, and post-myocardial infarction complications, is augmenting the market opportunity.
