Abstracts

Summary

The Taiwan kombucha market size was estimated at USD 22.6 million in 2024 and is projected to reach USD 71.2 million by 2033, growing at a CAGR of 13.6% from 2025 to 2033. The market is driven by rising vegan and plant-based preferences, a shift toward functional beverages with probiotic properties, and the perceived health benefits of kombucha.

Kombucha is a naturally fermented tea known for its distinctive taste and health-promoting qualities, which result from a live culture that generates organic acids, B vitamins, and enzymes during fermentation. In Taiwan, several local brands craft unique versions of kombucha using seasonal ingredients and botanical infusions, offering consumers a diverse and refreshing flavor experience. Traditional fermented foods such as wine, vinegar, sauerkraut, cheese, soy sauce, miso, and kimchi already enjoy popularity in Taiwanese cuisine, creating a receptive environment for kombucha. The island's rich agricultural landscape, abundant in high-quality teas, herbs, and fruits, allows producers to develop regionally inspired flavors that reflect Taiwan's local character and terroir.

In Taiwan, kombucha is gaining popularity as a healthier alternative to traditional sugary soft drinks and alcoholic beverages. Its natural probiotic content, along with anti-inflammatory and detoxifying benefits, aligns with the growing consumer interest in functional nutrition. This shift in health-conscious behavior is increasing demand for clean-label, minimally processed products, is actively driving the expansion of the kombucha market across the country.
