Abstracts

The global veterinary consumables market size was estimated at USD 1.6 billion in 2025 and is projected to reach USD 2.8 billion by 2033, growing at a CAGR of 7.4% from 2026 to 2033. The market is advancing due to the expansion of veterinary clinics, hospitals & diagnostic labs, the growth of preventive veterinary care & vaccination programs, and advancements in veterinary surgical & critical care procedures.

The rapid expansion of healthcare infrastructure spanning specialty hospitals, multi-clinic networks, mobile units, and advanced diagnostic laboratories is a major driver increasing demand for consumables. For instance, in December 2024, DCC Animal Hospital inaugurated its first advanced Jaipur facility, built to Japanese standards and equipped with modern technology, marking a major step in premium pet care and expanding its global preventive and surgical services presence.

In addition, in April 2025, Arista Advanced Pet Care opened its first specialty and 24/7 emergency hospital in Atlanta, introducing a veterinarian-led model and care navigation system to support growing demand for advanced, coordinated pet healthcare. As facilities adopt modern surgical, imaging, and diagnostic technologies, they require higher volumes of associated consumables such as anesthesia accessories, fluid delivery sets, biopsy kits, and monitoring disposables. The rise of corporate chains enhances procurement consistency and standardization, leading to bulk purchases of consumables. Moreover, increased availability of advanced procedures such as soft-tissue surgery, orthopedics, dentistry, and minimally invasive interventions raises daily consumable usage. This growth in service capacity directly amplifies consumable consumption, supporting long-term market expansion.

This trend is further supported by the rapid scaling of integrated, full-stack pet care platforms. For instance, in February 2026, Bengaluru-based Supertails raised USD 30 million in a funding round led by Venturi Partners. The capital is earmarked to expand its network of veterinary clinics and grooming centers; currently four in Bengaluru, each equipped with 24-hour service, in-patient departments, advanced diagnostic laboratories, and modern operation theatres; across multiple new cities in India. The company has also built a nationwide network of over 100 veterinarians including surgeons, diagnostics specialists, and paravet professionals, all trained in fear-free practices. As Supertails scales its physical clinic infrastructure and at-home veterinary services spanning consultations, vaccinations, and preventive care, the corresponding demand for consumables such as diagnostic kits, fluid delivery sets, surgical disposables, and monitoring accessories is expected to grow substantially, further supporting market expansion in the region.

In addition, the global shift toward preventive veterinary care is significantly increasing demand for consumables. As pet owners and livestock producers prioritize vaccination, parasite control, routine diagnostics, and wellness programs, clinics require a steady supply of needles, syringes, diagnostic strips, PPE, disinfectants, and sampling consumables. For instance, in October 2025, Boehringer Ingelheim launched a USD 2.5 million, three-year Animal Health Program to support veterinarian wellbeing, strengthen the talent pipeline, and expand access to care in underserved U.S. communities through strategic partnerships and long-term initiatives. In addition, preventive health guidelines promoted by associations further encourage regular checkups and early screening, increasing consumable turnover. Livestock health programs aimed at reducing antimicrobial use and improving productivity also raise the need for vaccination consumables and biosecurity supplies.

Furthermore, rising adoption of advanced surgical and critical care procedures in veterinary practice is driving substantial growth in consumables demand. As clinics perform more orthopedic surgeries, soft-tissue procedures, endoscopy, dentistry, and emergency care, they require high volumes of sterile disposables, monitoring accessories, fluid therapy sets, wound management materials, and anesthesia consumables. For instance, Intervertebral Disc Disease (IVDD), affects 25% of dachshunds and is prevalent in other short-legged breeds like French bulldogs in the

UK. Such disease conditions can be mitigated with surgical procedures that eventually propel the demand for consumables, including surgical supplies, anesthesia, imaging accessories, and postoperative care products. Moreover, technological advancements such as minimally invasive surgery, high-precision imaging, and improved anesthesia systems expand the range of treatable conditions, leading to repeated consumption of associated disposables. Thus, increasing demand for post-operative care and chronic disease management elevates usage of bandaging materials and infusion consumables. This transformation toward sophisticated animal care directly accelerates consumables market expansion.
