SUMMARY

A digital isolator is used to get a digital signal across a galvanic isolation boundary. They serve a similar purpose to optocouplers, except optocouplers are far too slow and error prone for high speed (1MHz+) digital signals. They also use a different coupling technology, usually transformer or RF link as opposed to an optical link. While digital isolators only work with digital signals, they are frequently used to transfer digitised versions of analogue signals. The resulting signal chain will have better bandwidth, accuracy and linearity in comparison to an optocoupler based system. Optocouplers have inherent non-linearity and high unit to unit variations (+- 50% of your signal), so the circuit will need to be immune to these variations or each unit individually calibrated. Multiplexing digital channels across a single digital isolator path can be achieved very easily, which in turn simplifies the circuit and results in a net cost saving in spite of using a more expensive isolation technology. In short, digital isolators are superior to optocouplers in almost every regard.
