The global medical tourism market has gained popularity in the recent years as a result of advancing medical services being made available in a cost-effective manner. Various medical services such as neurology, oncology, orthopedic surgery, dentistry, cosmology, and cardiology are available to medical tourists. Increasing awareness of regular medical treatments and advancing technology for better treatment options are raising demand for medical treatment. As medical treatment is quite expensive in Western countries, there has been a rising incidence of patient travel to developing countries where treatments are usually cost-effective. These expensive healthcare treatments have pushed patients to look for options in other regions, thus boosting medical tourism in developing nations.
