Encapsulation is a technique where material is coated or entrapped within another material. Flavors are expensive and sensitive products that are used as additives in the food and food products. To keep its integrity and stability for long term use these flavors are encapsulated or protected. Encapsulating or Microencapsulating Flavor is used to provide uniform and improved taste, colorings, improved shelf life and protection from harsh conditions. Flavor encapsulation provides physical barrier between flavor and environment to fulfill functions like protecting flavor from oxidation, moisture uptake, evaporation etc, controlled or triggered release and to separate incompatible flavor constituents to avoid adverse effects. Encapsulating fragrance is mainly used in the textile industry for the manufacturing of perfumed suits for customers.
