Abstracts

In 2012, the Canadian hyaluronic acid viscosupplementation market was valued at $13 million, an increase over the previous year. The market includes two distinct products, which vary in terms of the number of injections administered: single and multiple (usually three-injection). The growth of the single-injection segment had a significant influence on the overall market and will continue to do so over the forecast period.

Scope: This report pertains to a forecast period of 10 years (2009 – 2019) for Canada.
