Abstracts

Abstract:

A colposcopy is a 10- to 15-minute procedure in which the woman lies in a gynecological chair with her feet in footrests. An acetic acid solution is placed on the cervix, causing the cervical cells to fill with water and block the passage of light. Areas showing abnormalities in the cervix appear white, and abnormal blood vessels can also be seen. Lesions can be treated by freezing with liquid nitrogen, with a laser or with a cream. A colposcopy is done in a hospital or clinic, and the patient can leave as soon as it is over. This procedure was developed by the German physician Hans Hinselmann in 1925.
