Abstracts

This report gives an overview of the Internet access market in South Africa today and of the numerous innovative approaches developed to catch up.

Faced with high data prices, Internet access has failed to deliver its full promises in South Africa. Only 10% of households were connected at home in 2017 while just over half of the population accessed the Internet over mobile.

The report addresses the pricing and affordability issues and describes the main innovative models aiming at promoting 'Internet for All' in South Africa.
