Abstracts

This report examines national FTTH public policies by taking a detailed look at nine countries: Croatia, France, Germany, Ireland, Italy, Portugal, Spain, Sweden and the UK.

It is structured in two parts, providing:

Monographs for each country, describing the (demographic, technological) situation in each, details on the current programme (objectives, regulatory measures, financial support), the technologies used, governance and monitoring tools.

A synthesis that provides:

Analysis of the status of national programmes, set against the objectives of the Digital Agenda for Europe (DAE) and the progression of coverage rates;

A description of the different support mechanisms provided by the national programmes, and the latest news on each programme;

A local operator's perspective on their country's national programme.
