Abstracts

The global almond flour market size reached US$ 1.3 Billion in 2023. Looking forward, IMARC Group expects the market to reach US$ 2.2 Billion by 2032, exhibiting a growth rate (CAGR) of 6.3% during 2024-2032.

Almond flour is obtained from blanched almonds that are grounded and sieved into fine flour. It provides essential nutrients, such as vitamin E, calories, fat, carbohydrates, dietary fiber, manganese, magnesium, copper, and phosphorus. It assists in reducing low-density lipoprotein (LDL) cholesterol; lowering the risk of diseases like cancer, diabetes, stroke, and Alzheimer's disease; and improving heart and digestive health. As compared to wheat and coconut flour, it has lesser carbohydrate content and does not contain gluten-forming proteins. As a result, it is extensively utilized as an alternative to breadcrumbs to coat meats like fish, chicken, and beef.

Almond Flour Market Trends:

Presently, there is a considerable change in consumer preferences on account of inflating per capita income and improving standards of living across the globe. This, in confluence with the rising awareness among individuals about the health benefits of consuming almond flour-based products, represents one of the key factors bolstering the growth of the market. Besides this, there is a significant increase in the prevalence of the celiac disease that causes diarrhea, bloating, gas, anemia, and growth issues. This has resulted in the growing adoption of a gluten-free diet around the world due to its health benefits, such as easing digestive symptoms, reducing chronic inflammation, boosting energy, and promoting weight loss, which is contributing to market growth. Moreover, almond flour is widely used as a key ingredient in the food and beverage (F&B) industry worldwide for the preparation of bakery products like cakes, cookies, bread, and pastries. This, coupled with the expanding product employment in the cosmetics industry for the formulation of various skincare products, such as lotion and cream, is creating a favorable market outlook.
