Abstracts

The global floor sealer and finisher market size reached US$ 2.7 Billion in 2022. Looking forward, IMARC Group expects the market to reach US$ 4.2 Billion by 2028, exhibiting a growth rate (CAGR) of 7.29% during 2023-2028. The growing construction and infrastructure development activities, an enhanced focus on hygiene and cleanliness, and the increasing popularity of decorative flooring represent some of the key factors driving the market.

Floor sealer refers to a protective coating that is applied to the floor to create a barrier that protects against potential damage on the bare floor surface, while a finisher is a coating applied over a floor sealer to offer enhanced protection. The sealers function by penetrating the pores of the floor to prevent stains and damage, while the finishers form a protective layer on top of the sealer or existing floor surface to add a glossy or matte finishing and durability. In addition to this, they also help improve the quality of indoor air by creating a protective barrier on the floor surface and reducing dust and debris accumulation. They are typically composed of acrylic, polyurethane, or epoxy resin and are customizable in various gloss levels. Floor sealers and finishers can be applied to a wide range of floor surfaces, including wood, concrete, and tile. Some of the advantages offered by these products include improved floor protection, enhanced appearance, ease of cleaning, and excellent slip resistance for safety purposes.

Floor Sealer and Finisher Market Trends:

The global market is primarily driven by the augmenting product demand in residential and commercial buildings. This can be attributed to the growing construction and infrastructure development activities, particularly in emerging economies. In line with this, an enhanced focus on hygiene and cleanliness, particularly after the outbreak of COVID-19, is providing an impetus to the market. Moreover, the rapid product utilization in the healthcare sector for maintaining sterile and hygienic environment is also acting as a significant growth-inducing factor for the market. In addition to this, the increasing popularity of decorative flooring, including epoxy coatings and polished concrete is also resulting in a higher product uptake on the global level. The market is further driven by continual technological advancements in the formulation of floor sealers and finishers, such as nano-coating technology, with antimicrobials, slip-resistance agents, high chemical resistance and UV stability. Furthermore, the introduction of eco-friendly and sustainable product variants, such as water-based and low-VOC floor sealers and finishers is creating lucrative opportunities in the market. Some of the other factors contributing to the market include the growing adoption of DIY home improvement, inflating disposable incomes of the consumers, rapid urbanization and industrialization, and extensive research and development (R&D) activities.

Key Market Segmentation:

IMARC Group provides an analysis of the key trends in each segment of the global floor sealer and finisher market, along with forecasts at the global, regional, and country levels from 2023-2028. Our report has categorized the market based on product, application, distribution channel and end user.

Product Insights:

Solvent-based

Water-based

The report has provided a detailed breakup and analysis of the floor sealer and finisher market based on the product. This includes solvent-based and water-based. According to the report, solvent-based represented the largest segment.

Application Insights:

Concrete
