Abstracts

The global foreign exchange market size reached US$ 753.2 Billion in 2022. Looking forward, IMARC Group expects the market to reach US$ 1,143.2 Billion by 2028, exhibiting a growth rate (CAGR) of 7% during 2023-2028.

Foreign exchange (FX), also known as forex, refers to the systematic conversion of one currency into another at a specific forex rate. It functions through an electronic network of brokers, individual traders, banks, and other financial institutions. It allows fund transfers by utilizing various credit instruments, including foreign currency bills, telephonic transfers, and bank drafts. It also facilitates the flow of money obtained from international trade and promotes the trade of goods and services among different countries. As it is an easily accessible financial market, its participants range from tourists and amateur traders to large financial institutions and multinational corporations (MNCs).

Foreign Exchange Market Trends:

Rapid urbanization and inflating disposable income levels of individuals are among the key factors positively influencing the market. In line with this, a significant increase in international trade activities is catalyzing the demand for FX as it provides numerous benefits, such as minimal trading costs, high liquidity and transactional transparency, 24x7 trading opportunities, and vast trading volume. Besides this, the rising trend of digitization and the introduction of outright forward and currency options are contributing to market growth. Additionally, the development of advanced electronics and multiple internet-based platforms that allow users to exchange currencies conveniently between countries while ensuring the delivery of goods and services in a secure and centralized setting is creating a favorable market outlook. Along with this, the launch of automated conversion systems that offer improved flexibility and convenience during currency exchanges is driving the market. Furthermore, organizations are focusing on developing the overall infrastructure to provide improved security solutions for trading, which is propelling market growth.
