Abstracts

The GCC prefabricated building and structural steel market size reached US$ 3.94 Billion in 2023. Looking forward, IMARC Group expects the market to reach US$ 6.40 Billion by 2032, exhibiting a growth rate (CAGR) of 5.3% during 2024-2032.

Prefabricated buildings, also known as prefabs, are structured components manufactured at offsite locations and then transported to the construction site. On the other hand, structural steel frames are the skeletal layout of the building, wherein the prefabricated parts are assembled. They are manufactured using various materials like wooden panels, metal panels, glass, plastics, composites, and other reinforced plastics. They are suitable for temporary structures and relatively less expensive as they require less time and cost involvement. Besides this, they offer numerous other advantages, such as flexibility, sustainability, facilitate waste management, energy conservation, and protection from dust, moisture, and environmental hazards. As a result, prefabricated buildings and structural steel structures are gaining traction across the GCC region.

GCC Prefabricated Building and Structural Steel Market Trends:

The increasing population in the GCC countries is resulting in the rising construction and remodeling activities of residential and commercial structures. This represents one of the key factors positively influencing the market. In addition, increasing investments in mega infrastructure projects, including the construction of roads, railways, and airports, are offering lucrative growth opportunities to manufacturers. Apart from this, the rising focus of GCC countries on economic diversification to reduce the dependence on the oil and gas sector is creating a positive outlook for the market. Furthermore, a considerable rise in the travel and tourism sector, along with various upcoming events in the region, is driving the demand for convenient and cost-efficient construction solutions. Additionally, the introduction of stringent government regulations across the region to improve waste management and save energy is propelling the market growth. Moreover, prefabricated buildings do not generate any on-site waste and are more environmentally friendly than conventionally constructed buildings. These product benefits are strengthening the growth of the market in the region.
